

Episode 6 - A Brazilian Sex Symbol

Renewed Life

Returning from yet another Tribal Council at which had they voted out Debbie, Joe is grateful for another three days in the game: "Tribal Council tonight was rough," he says. "Debbie, uh, got voted out basically for what she did to Syd, and now I got an alliance with Carolina and Erinn." Spencer comments that the important thing about the vote is that everyone voted unanimously, as Joe praises him for his part in orchestrating Debbie's ouster: "I definitely owe Spencer for that one," Joe continues in his confessional. "You know, he was a huge part of creating that alliance and just to know that I have someone who stayed loyal, I think it means that I've got renewed life in this game."

Erinn sits down with Jerry to watch the fire and asks him where he stands on who should be the next to go. Jerry responds that he "was thinkin' Joe." But as the last person to find out that Debbie was being voted out, he senses that he could be in trouble and may actually be the next in line to be voted out. "Uh, I'm definitely worried about my position here," Jerry says. "In this tribe is, uh, four people who are a lot younger than myself, so they might think about formin' an alliance and leavin' me on the outside." Carolina joins Erinn and Jerry, and Spencer and Joe worry that the three original Timbira members might stick together after all. "I was thinkin' I was in a pretty good place," Jerry continues, "But then again, I was the last to find out about, uh, voting Debbie out, so that, uh, that makes me wonder where I stand." "I'm gonna have to try to come up with some good strategies," he laughs.

A Winning Attitude

After back-to-back Immunity Challenge wins, Jalapao continues to enjoy the good fortunes of victory. "As a tribe, we've won the last two Immunity Challenges, so we haven't had to vote anyone out at Jalapao," Candace says. "I think we have a really good team. Individually, everyone performs; everyone helps everybody out, and we come together as a team in the challenges." Not sharing Candace's positive appraisal of the situation, Coach believes that "Winning the last two challenges has allowed certain members of the tribe to last longer in the game than they should, namely Sandy and, uh, Candace." "I know, right now, my Timbira alliance wants to vote J.T. out," he explains. "I don't want to vote J.T. out. For me, the obvious choice is Sandy. I think J.T.'s strong; he's a warrior, so...I want him in my alliance more than some of these people from Timbira."

Reward Challenge - Pot Shots

The Jalapao and Timbira tribes arrive on their mats as host Jeff Probst reveals that Debbie was voted out at the last Tribal Council. The Jalapao members are visibly shocked at this news, and Coach once again shows his disappointment with the decision. "I was definitely shocked to see Debbie was gone," J.T. admits. "I mean, my heart sank. I thought Debbie would be here 'til the end, so...I don't know what the heck's goin' on at Timbira. Joe and Spencer'll probably be next."

Jeff then explains the rules of the challenge. The tribes will have five minutes to build a barricade of poles tied together with ropes inside two frames belonging to the opposing tribe. The tribes will then have to toss small ceramic pots from tribemate to tribemate through the two frames, avoiding breaking them against the barricade or dropping them. The tribe that tosses the most number of intact pots through the frames after ten minutes wins. The winning tribe will be rewarded with a trip to a beautiful waterfall and a relaxing afternoon barbecue. Since Jalapao has one extra member, Sandy is chosen to sit out of the challenge.

Jeff yells "Go!" and both tribes race to the opposing tribe's tunnel and begin building their blockades. The Jalapao members get off to a quick start, as they cram sticks and planks into the framework of the Timbira tunnel, trying to find the best way to obstruct the pots. Meanwhile, the Timbira tribe does the best they can, crisscrossing sticks and ramming planks to form complicated walls in Jalapao's frame until Jeff calls, "Stop! That's it!"

Both tribes now return to their own frames and wait for Jeff's signal for the second part of the challenge to begin. As Jeff says "Go!", pot after pot is broken for both tribes. Jalapao scores the first point when Candace catches a pot thrown by Coach. Carolina tries to toss a ceramic pot through the front tunnel, but constantly hits the barricade. After numerous tries, she finally gets a pot through to Jerry, who tosses it through the second frame to Joe, who tosses it to Spencer. Spencer catches it and then tosses it to Erinn, scoring the first point for Timbira. J.T. struggles to get past the second frame after numerous pots are blocked by the heavy barricade. In spite of this, Jalapao gains a lead as the Timbira continues to unintentionally smash pots and Candace continues to score. Timbira finally begins to develop a rhythm and gets several pots to Erinn, almost tying up the score with Jalapao. Both tribes fight hard until the final seconds of the challenge, desperately launching as many pots through their tunnels as possible. In the end, Jalapao comes out on top with a score of 15 compared to Timbira's 11, winning the challenge.

"Timbira lost the challenge again. Jalapao is definitely on a winning streak. You know, we need to get that broken sometime soon," Joe says.

Waterfall Reward

The Jalapao tribe celebrated their victory amongst the spectacular backdrop of Brazil's waterfalls. As the massive spread of hamburgers, chips, vegetables, and drinks comes into sight, the eager tribe pounces on the food, overjoyed with their feast. "Winning the Reward today felt phenomenal," Sandy expresses. "You know, our tribe did really great in that challenge, so we got to go to the waterfall and have a barbecue." "Oh my gosh. Hamburgers, watermelon, chips. I was lovin' it, you know? I mean, I think I ate just as much as the boys did," she narrates.

As the tribe crams hamburgers loaded with lettuce, onions, pickles, and other fixings into their mouths, Tyson suggests that "if we win the next Immunity Challenge, we can vote Timbira off and go to the Final Six as Jalapao." He attempts to convince his tribemates to vote together after the merge and stick together no matter what. "That'd be awesome, man," says a relieved J.T. "I guess spirits are pretty high around here and everybody's gettin' along pretty well," J.T. explains. "I mean, Tyson even said that we'd go to Final Six if we take this next challenge, so... it's gonna be interesting to see how it goes." As they continue to feast, Coach assures J.T. that he has nothing to worry about. "I like havin' that alliance," J.T. says, "But I'm also not gonna be the fifth or sixth guy in this thing."

The rest of the tribe jumps into the clear water and relaxes on floating tubes and rafts, as Sandy remains at the table and suffers stomach pains. "After everybody else went swimming, I felt very sick," she tells the camera. "My stomach is rumbling like, I don't even know what it's like; I guess like thunder or somethin' in there, you know? Hopefully I'll just puke and get over it cause we still gotta win an Immunity Challenge, you know, in the next couple days."

Gone Fishin'

Back at Timbira, the defeated and lethargic tribe members sit around camp and complain about losing another challenge. "When we got back from losing the Reward Challenge, I was very frustrated but I didn't want to just mope around camp," Spencer narrates, before deciding to go fishing. Jerry also continues to work hard around camp, collecting firewood and maintaining the fire. Spencer grabs the fishing equipment and tells Jerry that he's going out to try to catch fish. "I have been a fan of Survivor since I was 11 years old," Spencer continues. "I've never been a great fisherman, but I thought 'Hey, you know, what else am I gonna do out here? You know, what better time to learn it?' cause...I like to eat." Spencer surprises himself, as he casts out his fishing line into the river and is successful at catching a fish. "You know, I think it's kinda cool that a 19 year-old kid can come out here with not a lot of experience and catch fish," he glows in his confessional. Returning to camp with three medium-sized fish, Spencer is praised by his tribe for his efforts. His tribemates cook the fish over the fire and revel as they enjoy the much-needed food. "Oh, it was probably one of the best-tasting fish I've ever had just because I caught it," Spencer laughs. "It definitely felt good to know that, even though I'm the first teenager to ever play the game, I can be a provider and take care of people who are older than me, so hopefully, with this little boost, you know, we'll be able to win the next Immunity Challenge."

Sexual Healing

The next day, the Jalapao tribe decides to have a day of fun and laughter. "We won the Reward yesterday; I was feeling on a high," Candace narrates. "If we would have won the last Reward, I guarantee you me and Tyson would have been getting it on. He's so good-looking, like, it's not even just about the sex. At this point, I wouldn't mind having his children. You know, what a great way to secure an alliance," she laughs. Candace and Taj lounge in the shelter and check out Tyson, who is tending to the fire. "I'm just thankful to have some nice eye candy for us to stare at around the tribe," Candace says. Taj agrees: "I know; it's been far too long since I've seen my husband," she tells Candace. "You know, it's been like what? Two, three weeks? The women out here have our own needs; it's not just the men," Candace announces to the camera.

As the sexually-charged conversation continues, J.T. comments that he's never had a problem talking with women. "They love country boys like myself," he says. An amused Sandy observes, "I think some of my, uh, younger tribe members are thinkin' with different parts of the body than I am, you know? Even Taj, actually," she states. "But hell, I mean, I'm not blind either, you know? I definitely think, uh, Tyson is attractive, and he loves it, you know, the attention or whatever." Candace continues to fawn over a shirtless Tyson, as he lies on the sand, trying to improve his tan. "My favorite person in the tribe is who else? Tyson," Candace says with a sparkle in her eye. "Uh, in this tribe, probably Tyson," Taj answers in her confessional. "That's easy. That would be Tyson," Coach tells the camera in response to the same question. Breaking the pattern of his previous tribemates, J.T. admits, "I don't know if I really have a favorite. My favorite's probably on the other tribe." Meanwhile, a fixated Candace continues to watch Tyson's every move and comments to Taj about how muscular he looks when he arches his back. "I think Candace is pretty much obsessed with me," Tyson states. "I mean, I like her but there's nothing romantic there. My whole tribe, I think, thinks I'm like a Brazilian sex symbol," he chuckles. "They love me. It's pretty cool." Echoing Tyson's own thoughts about himself, Candace says, "Tyson's awesome. I mean, the dude's impressively strong; he's got a great sense of humor, but...I have to be careful because, number one, this is a game and if it comes down to him or me winning a million dollars, I want it to be me and that's the bottom line."

Survivor: Tocantins Fanfic

Treemail Arrives

The next morning, Erinn and Carolina return to the Timbira camp with treemail. Spencer is eager to win so that they can even out the tribal balance going into the merge. Erinn comments, "If we win today, we go into the merge five on five: five new Jalapao, five new Timbira. If we lose, Jerry most likely will be gone because we did make an alliance with Spencer and Joe, so this challenge is critical. We need to win Immunity today."

Immunity Challenge - Shoot Your Way Home

Jalapao and Timbira arrive on their respective colored mats. Host Jeff Probst explains the rules of the challenge. Each tribe will use a slingshot to shoot out a tile in three towers full of sand. After a tile is broken, the sand will be released from the tower and cause a bag of puzzle pieces to be released and the tile at the next tower to be uncovered. A different shooter must break each tile. Once all three bags of puzzle pieces are collected, two tribe members will assemble the puzzle. The first tribe to do so wins Immunity. Since Jalapao has one extra member, Taj is chosen to sit out of the challenge.

As the challenge begins, J.T. and Jerry immediately begin to take shots at their tribe's tiles. Jerry's military background comes in handy as he proves to be a strong marksman and quickly breaks Timbira's first tile. Jerry retrieves the first bag of puzzle pieces and passes the slingshot on to the next shooter. As Joe begins to shoot at Timbira's second tile, J.T. connects with Jalapao's first tile. He unties the bag of puzzle pieces and hands the slingshot off to Tyson, who takes over. A tense battle ensues as both men continue to aim for their second tile. Joe shatters Timbira's second tile and Tyson follows close behind, hitting Jalapao's second tile but it doesn't completely break. The final shooter for Timbira is Spencer, who takes a lucky shot and shatters his tribe's final tile in one hit. Tyson shoots at Jalapao's second tile again and breaks it in half. This time, the bag of puzzle pieces is released. Tyson and Spencer both get right to work on untying their bags. Tyson hands the slingshot to Coach, while Erinn and Carolina frantically begin the puzzle stage of the challenge for Timbira.

Timbira enjoys a sizeable lead as Coach continues to miss Jalapao's final tile, allowing Erinn and Carolina time to begin working on the puzzle. Watching Coach from the sidelines, Spencer says "When I hit that tile right away and saw Coach missing shot after shot, I thought for sure we were finally gonna win. I mean, we had a huge lead going into the puzzle.” Erinn and Carolina have a hard time figuring out the puzzle. As they confusedly experiment with different pieces, Coach finally breaks Jalapao’s third tile. He grabs the bag of puzzle pieces, before Candace and Sandy begin to work on Jalapao’s puzzle. Working calmly, Candace and Sandy quickly close the gap for Jalapao, aligning their first puzzle piece, as Erinn and Carolina continue to struggle. “We didn’t really have a strategy of putting the puzzle together,” Carolina admits. “We were just trying to figure it out as we went, and...I looked over at Jalapao and they had just put their first piece in and we still didn’t have one, so I was like “Damn!” Like, I knew they were gonna try and blame us.” All it takes is one piece, and the rest of the puzzle falls into place for Jalapao, winning them their third straight Immunity Challenge. “Oh my God!” Sandy exclaims with relief, as she hugs Candace.

Survivor: Tocantins Fanfic

Spencer can barely watch as Jeff hands the Immunity Idol to Sandy. “Losing again felt awful. I’m tired of losing; I’m tired of going to Tribal Council; and I’m tired of just basically sucking,” Spencer vents to the camera. Safe for another three days, Candace reflects on the current situation: “They’re getting ready for Tribal. They have to go back to Tribal Council tonight, and honestly, I mean, I really couldn’t care less who they vote out. I just want a merge to happen cause I know, whichever way it goes, I stand a good chance right now.”

Third Time in a Row

The defeated Timbira tribe returns to camp after yet another devastating loss. “We got our tails kicked big time,” Jerry observes, as tribemates disperse around camp. “Back to Tribal Council again, third time in a row,” a somber Spencer narrates, “And it’s extremely frustrating to be on a tribe that, for whatever reason, can’t seem to win Immunity.” Watching Carolina, Erinn, and Jerry from a distance, Spencer then contemplates the status of his original tribe in the game: “Original Jalapao, right now, is definitely a sinking ship; um, we’re down to four members and Timbira still has seven, so we either have to find a way to salvage ourselves tonight or I’m gonna have to jump off [the ship].”

Getting right to work, Spencer joins Carolina and Erinn at the fire and asks them if they’re planning on staying loyal to the alliance with him and Joe. Carolina responds that she doesn’t know yet what she’s going to do. Spencer then tells them where he stands on the upcoming vote: “I would prefer Jerry. Right now, that’s who I’m voting for, but I mean, I’ll vote with you no matter what, so if you guys decide you want to vote for Joe, I’m onboard with that.” His comment is met with silence from the undecided women. Spencer then suggests that Jerry has relationships with the other tribe that would work against them, but Joe and himself might be able to sway J.T. and Sandy. “I just would prefer to know well in advance, um, before Tribal Council,” Spencer requests. Erinn weighs the possibility of voting out Jerry before Joe: “Jerry is definitely a wildcard,” she explains. “You know, we don’t know who he’s gonna be loyal to because he has ties on the other tribe. Joe’s kinda stuck with us at this point and Spencer definitely makes a good argument because we know where [Joe] stands, but...my gut, right at this second, is telling me to vote Joe and that’s something I have to listen to.”

As Joe and J.T. rest in the Timbira tribe’s shelter, Spencer reveals to his ally that Carolina and Erinn are still undecided on the vote. “I don’t know what they’re gonna do,” he admits. “I feel like it’s gonna be either you or Jerry on the chopping block, and it's kinda like 'Why are we letting them control things?' You know what I mean?" Joe agrees with Spencer, and adds "Especially after they lost on the puzzle." "Exactly," Spencer replies. "You know, you don't lose the challenge for us and still get to decide who's going home." "Carolina should not have been on the puzzle," Spencer insists. Feeling the heat of the upcoming vote, Joe decides that rather than let Carolina and Erinn determine his and Jerry's fate, the three men should team up and sever the two women, who would prove to be a strong twosome after the merge: "Those girls are getting a little too much power, and it makes me a little nervous having a pair like that around," Joe says. With Spencer seemingly onboard with the new plan, Joe sets out to convince Jerry to vote out Erinn: "I think Erinn's smarter than people give her credit for," Joe tells the camera. "She hasn't done anything to make anybody see her as a big threat, but uh, she's good at strategy and that can get dangerous."

Survivor: Tocantins Fanfic

As Tribal Council draws nearer, Joe pulls Jerry aside and questions him about the vote. Jerry asks Joe what he's heard and Joe reveals that they are both on the chopping block and he's waiting on Carolina and Erinn to make a decision. "Unless you want to make a move against the two of them, it's gonna be one of us," Joe proposes. "Which one did you have in mind?" Jerry asks. "Erinn," Joe states. "I think she's the brains behind them two." "You're right about that," Jerry replies. He takes a few seconds to think about the vote and then agrees to Joe's proposition: "So, it'll be Erinn tonight and then, uh, Carolina next time." "Yep," Joe says, "And then it doesn't matter who they vote for." Joe and Jerry shake hands to solidify their alliance. "Alright. That makes me feel better," Joe tells him.

Relieved to have secured a majority of the tribe, Joe reports to Spencer that Jerry agreed to vote out Erinn. Recapping the new strategic developments, Spencer tells the camera, "So what's happening now is Jerry, myself, and Joe are gonna vote Erinn to break up her and Carolina." "I mean, I've come to like Erinn, but I could lose her a hell of a lot easier than I could lose Joe right now," he says. Meanwhile, as he takes a rest in the shelter, Jerry ponders his vote and begins to have second thoughts about voting out Erinn: "You know, I told Joe I'd vote with him for Erinn, but I may have, uh, given out a handshake too fast. If I align myself with Joe, I'm aligning with someone who's a much bigger threat than the two females." "I've been pretty fortunate so far," he says. "I haven't really had to play the strategic part of the game too much, but uh, maybe it's time I try and go, uh, much further."

Jerry meets with Carolina and Erinn by the river. "What's going on, Jerry?" Erinn inquires. In an attempt to make sure his neck isn't on the chopping block, Jerry tries to direct the votes back onto Joe. "I heard that the two of you was thinkin' about voting for me. I just, I really wanna stay and continue on," Jerry pleads. Erinn asks who told him he was a target. "Joe," Jerry divulges. "He come to me and he said 'Let's vote Erinn, cause Erinn, she's sneaky; you know, she's a snake in the grass,' and he got Spencer with him." "They was tryin' to blame you for losin' the challenge," Jerry reveals. "That sucks," Erinn exclaims, as her thoughts about the vote become clearer. "Tonight at the Tribal Council, Spencer and Joe is gonna vote for Erinn," Jerry explains. "I was thinkin' about it for a while, and I think I'm gonna vote for Joe, so whoever the girls decide is, uh, that's who's going home tonight, but...I had to ensure that my name wasn't gonna come up."

In the final moments before Tribal Council, Joe approaches Erinn and Carolina and confirms that voting out Jerry is a go, despite his intentions to vote for Erinn. Erinn, on the other hand, is confident that Joe will be the next to go: "Joe still thinks that we think it's gonna be Jerry, but really, like, it's gonna be Joe, and you know, that's what you get for trying to form another alliance against me." Talking outside of the shelter, Erinn tells Jerry that he has earned her trust and she'll stay loyal to him. "Nobody gave me and Carolina a chance from Day One and now we're sortof running things," Erinn continues. "Like, we are playing this game and we're doing an awesome job." In a private moment with Erinn, Carolina cackles that she loves the power, before walking out to Tribal Council. "I think we know what we have to do," Erinn whispers to Carolina.

Tribal Council #6 - Timbira Tribe

At Tribal Council, Jeff begins by reminding the Timbira tribe that they've won only one challenge since the swap and lost five. "Spencer, in your opinion, what went wrong at the challenge today?" Jeff inquires. "First of all, I don't like to lose. I mean, I hate to lose, so I'm at a loss for words," Spencer says. "It seemed like we were so far ahead of them today, at least in that first part, and then I don't know what happened, if it was just Erinn and Carolina getting nervous or miscommunication, but...it's definitely hard to sit back and watch, you know, your tribe fall apart challenge after challenge." Jeff then asked Carolina what happened: "I don't think you can point one thing out as losing the challenge. I think we picked the best people for the job. You know, there's no use dwelling on it now. We lost. Like, get over it," she bluntly answers, as Spencer tenses his expression.

"I actually disagree," Spencer blurts out. "I think I've been pretty good at the puzzle challenges so far and you [Carolina] really haven't done any, so..." Jeff then asks Spencer why he wasn't doing the puzzle: "That's actually a very good question. Um, I don't even know. I mean, when we get into challenges, it's kindof like a free-for-all for who's gonna do what, you know? And, uh, I don't know; I guess Carolina just said she wanted to do it." "But, at the same time, like, if you think you're gonna be better at something, you need to step up and be heard and not just bring it up at Tribal," Carolina snaps back. Knowing to pick his battles, Spencer widens his eyes and shrugs, allowing Carolina to have the last word.

"So Jerry, why wasn't Spencer doing the puzzle?" Jeff asks. Jerry agrees with Carolina that Spencer didn't express an interest in doing the puzzle. "He never brought it up," Jerry says. Jeff then returns to Spencer, this time asking him if he feels at all responsible for the tribe's loss. Seeing an opportunity to influence the vote, Spencer says no: "Well, first of all, I don't think Carolina knew what she was doing, but I personally think Erinn should be held responsible. I mean, if doing puzzles is your thing and you screw it up, I think that's kinda your fault," he accuses. Surprised by Spencer's comment, Erinn simply smirks and replies "That's interesting..."

Reflecting on the conflict, Jeff tells Joe that if he keeps quiet, he might not have anything to worry about. "I'm just hangin' back, man," an amused Joe laughs. The conversation then switches topics as Jeff brings up a possible upcoming merge: "Carolina, if you do merge, just based on numbers, you could be in trouble." "Yeah; I mean, if there was a merge tomorrow, we go in two members down and I know already I don't have the relationships with members of the other tribe, so for me, loyalty is gonna be really important. People who are gonna be loyal to me after a merge," she says. Jeff then asks Erinn what's going through her mind about the impending vote: "There's more that you don't know than you know," Erinn begins. "I mean, we don't know if there's an old Timbira loyalty still; we don't know if there's a new Jalapac loyalty and if there is, it doesn't matter who we vote off tonight cause they're gonna pick us off one by one, so...you just have to make the best decision you can going on what you know."

Jeff asks Joe what he's basing his vote on: "Well, I'm not gonna vote for Spencer," Joe answers, "And there's no chance that these two [Carolina and Erinn] are gonna break, so you know, I can only vote for Jerry at this point, Jeff." Erinn quietly smirks to herself, knowing that Joe's answer is a lie to mask his true intentions of voting her out. Finally, Jeff asks Jerry if there are any questions in his mind about the vote: "The only vote I can make is to keep myself in the game," Jerry says. "We're down to so few tribe members now; uh, there's not too many individuals we can choose to get rid of, so...things are heatin' up a little bit. It comes down to strategy, and I do have some questions in my mind about the vote, Jeff, yes." With this, the five Timbira members cast their votes.

Jeff then tallies the votes, and reveals them one at a time to the castaways:

ERINN.

JOE.

JOE.

ERINN.

With only one vote left, Spencer and Joe are confident that Erinn's time in the game is over, while Erinn and Carolina are confident that Joe will be next to go. Jerry's vote is the deciding factor.

JOE.

In yet another surprising blindside, Joe Dowdle, the 26 year-old real estate broker from Houston, Texas, becomes the sixth person voted out of Survivor: Tocantins - The Brazilian Highlands when Jerry flips back to his original tribe and spares Erinn. Although Spencer is relieved to remain in the game, he realizes that his stock just went down as he has now lost his closest ally and is outnumbered in his tribe.

Joe's Final Words

Disappointed to be betrayed, Joe leaves behind his final words: "Definitely mixed emotions right now. I'm disappointed. I mean, I'm a little pissed at myself because I feel like I could have won this game if I hadn't thrown that challenge. You know, I gave this game everything I had, and it sucks to walk away from it before even the merge. I could have gone a lot further. I wasn't gonna quit, but that's how it falls. You know, a million bucks would've been awesome, but my fingers are crossed that J.T. or Spencer wins it all."

Survivor: Tocantins Fanfic

Episode 7 - "They're All Just Lemmings"

Spencer feels the pressure of being outnumbered on Timbira and is determined to stay in the game. Will the youngest Survivor ever be able to change his fate?

As the two tribes finally merge into one, another violent rainstorm puts a damper on their celebration.

The game becomes more complicated, as several castaways are forced to choose between old and new loyalties, and relationships are put to the test when decoy alliances begin to form. Which castaways will find themselves in the minority?

Episode 6 Voting History:

3 Votes Against	Survivors Voting Against Joe

2 Votes Against	Survivors Voting Against Erinn
